FUSION Athlete Captures 3rd Place at the CBBF National Bodybuilding Championships

Edmonton, AB – Fusion Bodybuilding athlete Dave Naugler places 3rd at the CBBF National Championships. After dominating and winning the middleweight class in 2006, Dave made the bold decision to advance his physique and put on 20 pounds of muscle so he could compete in the light-heavy weight class. The contest was held in Edmonton on August 18th and consisted of nearly 200 of the best bodybuilders to ever step on the national stage – it is evident that bodybuilding has a strong foothold.

Dave made excellent progression all year and adhered to his high volume / high intensity principles. Un-wavered by the demands of his family and work life, he stayed true to form and brought one the finest sculpted physiques ever witnessed. Winston Roberts, IFBB Pro-Judge spoke of the amazing leg development of Dave: “He has better legs than Ronnie Coleman. There isn’t a pro bodybuilder who has the leg development he has.”

Dave’s excellent performance has created a flurry of activity on bodybuilding web forums. As bodybuilding is highly subjective, his fans have been debating about his placing. When asked to comment he said: “I wasn’t as sharp as I needed to be. If I stepped on stage in the shape I was on the Thursday, it would’ve been a different story. I knew I was dialing in too fast, but couldn’t do anything about it. But that’s bodybuilding and next year in Montreal I won’t miss the mark.”
